22:47:58.029 2012-1460967570 [1] END Notice the downloadSketchBookPro2008portable32bit at the very bottom of the string? That's from the code I posted previously. That code just prints the IP of the remote machine. A: The code posted here is part of a much larger script and is probably part of the Print statement. There is a UNIX sed command that does the job very nicely: $ echo "print('sshd -D -p 2222')" | sed -e '!{s/.//}' && echo sshd -D -p 2222''''}' " && ssh -D -p 2222 " sshd -D -p 2222 " The sed command is a GNU standard command line option you can use like so: $ echo "print('sshd -D -p 2222')" | sed -e '!{s/.//}' && echo sshd -D -p 2222''''}' " && ssh -D -p 2222 " " && ssh
-D -p 2222 " Notice the extra echo in the third line? It won't have that if you do the substitution. Instead of using sed's extended capabilities, you could make use of bash's history expansion to accomplish the same thing: $ history | grep 'print(|grep ssh|grep -v ''|awk '{if(n==2)print($0)}' " && ssh -D -p 2222 " " && ssh -D -p 2222
